A method was developed for determination of viable cell concentration of brewer's yeast Saccharomyces cerevisiae in malts using an approach of fitting the respiration rate function to the measured generation time and alcohol production profile and subsequent application of an exponential model for determination of cell number. Log phase culture of five strains of S. cerevisiae was used to determine the applicability of the method and the protocol for malt samples, and the method was found to be highly reproducible and reliable. Several strains of S. cerevisiae presented in typical malt values at the time of malting, and a direct relation between viability and beer fermentation was found. A correlation with values obtained by a plating method was found when the generation time at the time of inoculation is known. Passengers on an Easyjet flight from Gatwick to the Irish capital were asked to bring their own seatbelts for a flight later in the day, staff on the flight said this afternoon. The passenger plane was forced to make an emergency landing in Ibiza after an "unusual request" from a passenger caused its systems to fail. A statement said: "The pilot of flight EZJ7203 from London to Dublin requested all passengers to bring their own seatbelts on board for the return journey to Heath f678ea9f9e
